We're able to estimate precisely what we can ship in a given cycle and given resources. 79 1	Our sprint increments can be shipped after the iteration without requiring additional work. 60
We get stuff done really quickly. No waiting, no delays. 62	We limit our 'Work in Progress' to maintain focus at all times. 69 1
Looking at our recent work, I am really confident that we will deliver on expectations. 83 1

What are recent examples for an increment that wasn't working/shippable at the end of the sprint?

Trying to add a last minut large scale feature, we had to scrap the idea

Multiple un-updated commits to the same branch

1

When did our ways of working create a suboptimal flow of work? (e.g. policies are unclear, not suitable or not adhered to)

Having the features ready for usability testing took some time and had some delays certain tasks depended on others, causing delays or put on pause temporarily

1

1

When did our way of working work well?

Our workflow was really smooth during the sprint were we used daily check-ins and consistently updating each other on dicord and jira.

Much more check-ins both meetings and by chat

Making changes according to user feedback. Marking issues with the Usability Testing tag for priority

Having regular meetings and task updates helped

Much more help and collaboration constant updates, communication and frequent meetings to check in with work progress and task updates helped with app progress

Assigning Tasks ✓

Assign tasks and deadlines to team members

(Karim & Zach)   💬 6   ✺ Apr 6, 2025

💬 good separation of concerns

Responsive Members ✓

Members should be responsive to not hold up tasks.

(Everyone)   💬 6   ✺ Apr 6, 2025

💬 Team members were a lot more responsive

Learning Experience ✓

Did everyone meet the personal growth they expected as a software developer. Did we learn new things and how to work more efficiently.

(Everyone)   💬 9   ✺ Apr 6, 2025

💬 I learned that communication is key and clearly …
